Partner Network – Admission Policy and Principles of Cooperation

The Partner Network of Chumpol Trading Group connects legally and economically independent companies on the basis of long-term business relationships, mutual trust and professional cooperation.

The Partnership Concept

The Partner Network connects independent companies through long-term business relationships with Chumpol Trading Group. The focus is not on formal membership or a joint organisation, but on tangible commercial benefits, reliable business relationships and efficient communication.

The strength of an established partner network becomes particularly evident when an individual partner faces an immediate business challenge. This may occur, for example, when an existing customer order requires a product delivery that cannot be fulfilled from the partner's own inventory within the required procurement timeframe.

In such cases, where another partner has corresponding goods previously purchased through Chumpol Trading Group available, short-term product support within the Partner Network may be facilitated.

This enables existing inventory to be used where it is required at short notice. Central procurement and supply of partners through Chumpol Trading Group remain unchanged.

Product support is voluntary, based on actual available inventory and without impairing the supporting partner's own business commitments. It serves exclusively to bridge a specific short-term requirement and does not create a permanent supply entitlement or an obligation to maintain specific inventory levels.

Customer relationships, projects and existing business responsibilities remain, as a matter of principle, assigned to the partner responsible for them.

Partnership therefore means not only access to improved purchasing and business terms, but also the opportunity to make pragmatic short-term use of available resources within an established network.

Benefits of the Partnership

A partnership with CTG is intended to provide tangible benefits in day-to-day business. Depending on the scope and development of the business relationship, partner companies may benefit from the services and opportunities described below.

The following provisions explain the organisational and legal framework of the Partner Network as well as the requirements and conditions applicable to the individual services.

1. Purpose and Principles of the Partner Network

The Partner Network serves the long-term development and strengthening of its partner companies. It provides an organisational framework for independent companies seeking to expand their business relationships, market opportunities, procurement options and commercial flexibility through reliable cooperation.

The Network is not merely a sales and procurement structure; it is intended to be a robust commercial network whose value can also become apparent in exceptional market and crisis situations.

The partnership complements the individual business relationship between the participating companies. It does not replace separate contracts, supply agreements, general terms and conditions or other legal arrangements.

Participation in the Partner Network is voluntary. Membership does not, as a general principle, create any obligation to purchase specified quantities or to cooperate exclusively with Chumpol Trading Group or other partner companies.

2. Formation and Development of the Partner Network

The foundations of today's Partner Network were established during the global restrictions of 2021 and 2022. The significantly reduced opportunities for personal meetings, international travel and traditional business processes led to increased use of digital communication and the expansion of long-term cooperation among existing business partners.

These initially individual business relationships gradually developed into an international network of independent companies. The common basis is not corporate or economic dependency, but voluntary cooperation based on shared expectations regarding reliability, quality and professional business conduct.

Today, the Network includes partner companies from various regions of Asia and Europe. These Business Regulations are intended to establish the relevant principles transparently and comprehensibly.

3. Legal Nature of the Partnership

Partner companies remain legally and economically independent businesses. Membership in the Partner Network does not create, in particular:

- any corporate participation,
- any joint management,
- any franchise relationship,
- any licensing system,
- any authority to represent other partner companies,
- any obligation to assume joint liability,
- any automatic exclusivity obligation, or
- any obligation to pay membership fees.

Each partner company acts in its own name, for its own account and under its own responsibility. No partner is authorised to enter into legal obligations in the name of Chumpol Trading Group or another partner company without express written authorisation.

Individual trading, project, supply, credit, exclusivity or confidentiality agreements remain unaffected and may be concluded separately.

4. Membership Costs

Membership in the Partner Network is generally free of charge. No general admission fees, membership fees, franchise fees, licence fees or system fees are charged for admission or membership.

Commercial cooperation is conducted exclusively on the basis of specific business relationships and individually agreed transactions. Where individual services, technical integrations or special services incur costs, these require a separate agreement.

5. Requirements for Partnership

The Partnership is generally open to commercially active companies whose business model and commercial orientation are compatible with the principles of the Partner Network.

Partner companies may include, in particular:

- wholesalers,
- importers,
- distributors,
- specialist retailers,
- trading companies,
- online retailers,
- project companies, and
- other companies with business activities suitable for the Network.

Admission requires, in particular, that the applicant company:

- demonstrably conducts commercial business,
- has a proper corporate identity and the required registrations,
- complies with the laws applicable to its business activities,
- maintains transparent and professionally organised business operations,
- is willing to cooperate on a long-term and trust-based basis, and
- acknowledges the principles of these Admission and Business Regulations.

6. Admission Procedure

Admission to the Partner Network generally takes place on the basis of a written expression of interest or by invitation from Chumpol Trading Group.

There is no entitlement to admission. Decisions are made following an individual assessment based on consistent principles.

6.1 Expression of Interest

The interested company initially submits a written enquiry containing sufficient information about its corporate identity, activities, business experience and the intended scope of potential cooperation.

6.2 Preliminary Assessment

The preliminary assessment may include, in particular:

- the identity and legal existence of the company,
- the nature and duration of its business activities,
- the reliability and professionalism of previous communications,
- the commercial plausibility of the proposed cooperation,
- the quality and transparency of business processes, and
- general suitability for long-term cooperation.

6.3 Compliance Review

Where required for the specific business relationship, Chumpol Trading Group may request additional information or evidence. This may be necessary to meet legal requirements, verify corporate identity or ensure proper business relationships.

6.4 Assessment

An application is not assessed solely on individual turnover, size or location criteria. The decisive factor is an overall assessment of the company's suitability and the expected quality of long-term cooperation.

6.5 Decision

Admission is decided by the Partner Council and the management of Chumpol Trading Group.

The decision may be made immediately, made subject to further information or conditions, or made after an appropriate period of business cooperation.

As a general principle, a rejection does not require a detailed explanation unless otherwise required by law.

7. Equal Treatment and Objective Assessment

Applications and existing partnerships are generally assessed according to transparent commercial criteria.

Different treatment solely on the basis of origin, nationality, company size, geographical location, religion or worldview is not part of the admission procedure.

Different commercial terms may, however, be appropriate where they are based on objectively different circumstances, including:

- the nature and scope of the specific business relationship,
- payment and credit risks,
- logistical requirements,
- regional market conditions,
- contractually agreed services, or
- other objectively justified commercial criteria.

8. Rights of Partner Companies

Within the scope of the actual cooperation, membership in the Partner Network generally provides the following rights:

- professional and respectful treatment,
- assessment in accordance with the applicable principles of the Partner Network,
- the opportunity to participate in elections and participation processes in accordance with these Business Regulations,
- the right to submit proposals and suggestions,
- appropriate information regarding material developments within the Partner Network, and
- protection of confidential information provided under the applicable agreements.

Individual partner companies may also receive additional services or special terms depending on the specific business relationship. This does not create an automatic entitlement for other partners to identical conditions.

9. Detailed Description of Partner Services

The following sections describe the individual services and support opportunities in detail. Unless otherwise stated, access to these services requires an existing business relationship and compliance with the relevant commercial, organisational and technical requirements.

Benefit 1: Individual Partner Terms

Partner companies may receive terms individually tailored to the respective business relationship. Factors may include the duration and quality of cooperation, sales volume, product groups, quantities, forecasts, project volumes and the strategic importance of the business relationship.

Possible partner terms may include individual purchasing conditions, special arrangements for specific product areas, growth-related conditions or special agreements for strategic business areas.

Benefit 2: Volume Pricing, Quantity Discounts and Project Pricing

Depending on product group, purchase quantity and project scope, partner companies may receive access to attractive volume pricing, quantity discounts and individual project pricing.

Particularly for larger customer projects or predictable quantities, individual pricing may be arranged. The objective is to enable partners to achieve competitive calculations while providing a sound commercial basis for sustainable, long-term cooperation.

Benefit 3: Extended Payment Terms and Individual Credit Facilities

Partner companies may, depending on the respective business relationship and individual financial assessment, benefit from extended payment terms or individually agreed trade credit facilities.

The specific arrangement may take into account sales development, payment history, business potential, project structure and previous cooperation. Extended payment and credit arrangements may provide partners with additional flexibility in financing their ongoing business. The initial payment term for a partner is 30 days net.

Benefit 4: Flexible Trade Credit for Growth

In the case of exceptionally large orders or short-notice project opportunities, the existing trade credit facility may be temporarily increased. Irrespective of existing payment terms, trade credit or credit arrangements, short-term additional trade credit may be granted without additional interest charges and without any participation or ownership claims.

The relevant decision is made taking into account the specific market and business situation and the history of cooperation and may, in suitable cases, be made within a few hours. This can enable partners to implement larger orders and projects at short notice without their growth being restricted solely by temporary liquidity limits.

This may enable a partner company to fulfil larger orders for which its regular trade credit facility would temporarily be insufficient.

Such support may be particularly relevant where an exceptional business opportunity arises at short notice and a rapid decision is required.

The purpose of this support is not to control or economically bind the partner, but to support its independent growth. The partner remains independent in its entrepreneurial decisions and development.

Your Order. Your Growth. Our Support.

Benefit 5: Early and Extended Product Access

Where available and provided for the respective cooperation, partner companies may receive early access to new products, product information and selected market information.

This may include early briefings, information prior to official product launches, selected pre-launch information and early access to relevant product and market information.

This enables partners to incorporate new products into their market, sales and project planning at an early stage and, where appropriate, prepare for new business opportunities before broader market availability.

Benefit 6: Access to Exclusive SKUs and Special Product Variants

Depending on the product, manufacturer agreement and availability, partner companies may receive access to selected exclusive SKUs, retailer variants, special models or specific product configurations.

Such products may provide partners with additional opportunities to differentiate themselves from competitors and support the development of their own customer offerings.

The specific scope of product access is determined by the relevant manufacturer agreements, regional or contractual requirements and actual product availability.

Benefit 7: Priority in Restricted Availability and Allocation

Where product availability is limited or manufacturer allocation is restricted, partner companies may, within the available options, receive preferential consideration.

This may include reserved quantities, preferential allocation, project-specific product reservations or early information regarding supply constraints and expected availability.

Early transparency regarding delivery quantities, shortages and allocation situations can help partners plan their own customer and project activities more reliably.

Priority or reservation is subject to the actual availability of the relevant quantities and must be compatible with applicable manufacturer, contractual and market conditions.

Benefit 8: Deal Registration and Protected Projects

Partner companies may register qualified customer projects and business opportunities under an agreed deal-registration process.

The purpose of deal registration is to protect the partner that develops a project, identifies a business opportunity or performs the relevant customer work for a qualified project.

Where the requirements are met, registered projects may be protected against unnecessary channel conflicts and supported through individual project pricing, special terms or project-specific inventory planning.

The objective is to prevent already-developed business opportunities from being adversely affected by parallel and uncoordinated activities within the sales channel.

Benefit 9: Qualified Leads and Joint Development of Larger Projects

Where suitable business opportunities are available, qualified partners may receive access to relevant leads, customer enquiries and project enquiries.

Business opportunities may be referred particularly where a partner is especially well suited to handle the project based on technical expertise, regional access, industry experience or previous cooperation.

Larger customers and projects may be jointly developed where required. This may include joint offer planning, technical preparation, commercial calculation, coordination of product availability and implementation support.

The objective is not merely to pass on business opportunities at short notice, but to support partners in successfully and sustainably developing larger customer relationships.

Benefit 10: Extended Access to Confidential Information and Protected Business Areas

Close and strategic cooperation requires mutual trust and responsible handling of sensitive information. Where an appropriate confidentiality agreement (Non-Disclosure Agreement – NDA) exists and the information is required for the cooperation, partners may receive access to selected confidential information and protected business areas.

Access to confidential information may include, in particular:

- Purchasing terms: confidential purchase prices, manufacturer terms, discounts, bonuses, rebates, special terms and other commercial arrangements
- Sales prices and calculations: individual customer prices, project prices, price commitments, price lists, margins and calculation bases
- Manufacturer and supplier information: confidential manufacturer agreements, contracts, incentive models, special arrangements, bonus models and relevant contacts
- Product roadmaps: information on upcoming products, planned product lines, launch periods and EOL/EOS information
- Pre-launch information: products not yet publicly announced, product information, samples, test units or other confidential advance information
- Availability and allocation: inventory levels, expected deliveries, manufacturer allocations, shortage information and project-specific product planning
- Forecasts and planning data: sales forecasts, quantity planning, purchase intentions, forecasts and planned market launches
- Customer information: where required for the respective cooperation, customer lists, contacts, sales developments, purchasing behaviour, existing projects and other relevant reference data
- Supplier and sourcing information: manufacturers, suppliers, sources of supply, contacts and relevant contractual or supply structures
- Deal-registration information: information identifying which partner is handling which end customer, project or business opportunity
- Project information: tenders, quantities, end-customer information, planned rollouts, project periods and commercially relevant project parameters
- Partner information: individual partner terms, partner status, agreed targets, bonuses and other non-public information relating to the cooperation
- Bonus and incentive systems: annual bonuses, growth bonuses, sell-out bonuses, Marketing Development Funds and comparable incentive and support models
- Marketing and sales planning: planned campaigns, product launches, advertising activities, promotions and strategic market measures
- Sales and revenue information: confidential sales and revenue developments by customer, product, brand, region or period
- Strategic business planning: expansion plans, new markets, sales channels, strategic partnerships and other non-public business plans
- Internal processes and know-how: procurement processes, logistics models, pricing mechanisms, business processes, experience and other commercial know-how
- Technical information: technical documentation, APIs, EDI interfaces, data structures, integrations and other information required for technical cooperation
- Confidential contractual content: manufacturer contracts, distributor agreements, partner contracts, special arrangements and other non-public contractual provisions
- Trade secrets: non-public information with commercial or strategic value that requires special protection due to its confidential nature
- Financial and corporate planning: where required for a specific cooperation, confidential planning data, investment plans, internal budgets and other commercial information

Access to such information is granted solely to the extent required and agreed for the relevant cooperation. Confidential information may be used only for the purposes of the respective cooperation and is subject to the applicable NDA or other confidentiality agreement.

At the same time, confidential information belonging to the partner company will be protected accordingly under the applicable agreements. Mutual confidentiality therefore applies not only to information belonging to CTG Group or its affiliated business areas, but also to protectable information belonging to the respective partner.

Benefit 11: Professional EDI Integration and Digital Logistics Processing

Partner companies may receive access to digital communication and EDI systems. This can enable structured information exchange throughout key order and logistics processes.

Depending on the systems and requirements involved, technical integration may include:

- electronic order transmission
- order confirmations
- delivery and status information
- tracking and shipping data
- availability information
- automated data transmission
- technical interfaces and integrations
- support for logistics- and customs-related information processes

Digitising these processes can reduce manual effort, minimise sources of error, accelerate processing times and increase transparency throughout the flow of goods.

Benefit 12: Direct Decision-Making and Escalation Channels

Qualified partners may benefit from short communication channels and direct contacts. In complex, time-critical or exceptional business matters, direct coordination with the responsible specialist and decision-making functions may be available.

This may be relevant in particular for exceptional project enquiries, short-notice trade-credit decisions, critical delivery dates, allocation situations, complex technical requirements or other business matters requiring a decision beyond standard processing.

The objective is to reduce unnecessary internal coordination and, where commercially necessary and organisationally possible, enable fast and responsible decisions.

Benefit 13: Enhanced Partner Support and Personal Contacts

Partner companies may receive access to enhanced and prioritised support as well as personal contacts.

This may include priority handling of enquiries, direct coordination of complex matters and closer support for strategically important projects.

Partner support is intended particularly for situations where standardised processing is insufficient and individual coordination between sales, technical, logistics and other relevant functions is required.

Benefit 14: Pre-Sales Engineering and Configuration Advisory

Partner companies may receive support for complex or technically demanding projects through pre-sales engineering and technical/product configuration advisory services.

Support may include selection of suitable products, technical solution design, compatibility checks, configuration matters and preparation of larger customer projects.

This can help identify technical risks at an early stage, shorten planning cycles and improve the quality of complex customer proposals.

Benefit 15: Simplified Service, RMA and DOA Processing

Simplified and prioritised processes may be made available to partner companies for service, RMA and DOA cases.

Depending on the product, manufacturer policy and availability, these may include simplified processing, priority coordination and advance replacement or exchange solutions.

The objective is to reduce downtime, restore affected end customers to operational status as quickly as possible and avoid unnecessary delays in ongoing customer projects.

The specific process depends on the relevant product, manufacturer requirements, applicable warranty and service conditions and organisational capabilities.

Benefit 16: Price and Inventory Protection

To reduce certain market, price and inventory risks, partners may, where individually agreed and commercially feasible, benefit from additional protection mechanisms.

These may include price-protection arrangements under which partners may receive support in the event of certain subsequent price reductions affecting eligible inventory already held in stock.

Depending on product group, market and manufacturer conditions, stock-rotation arrangements and support in selling suitable inventory may also be agreed.

Such measures may reduce the risk associated with price changes and inventory levels and provide partners with greater planning security when stocking relevant products.

Principle and Conditions for Partner Services

All enhanced services, support measures, individual terms and special partner arrangements are subject to the relevant commercial, financial, organisational, technical and, where applicable, contractual requirements.

The specific design of a service may depend on the respective partner, previous cooperation, project, financial situation, product group, product availability, manufacturer agreements and other relevant circumstances.

Membership in the Partner Network does not create an automatic or unrestricted entitlement to individual trade credit, specific credit limits, exclusive products, price protection, inventory reservations, allocation, deal protection, confidential information, leads or other special individual services.

The scope and conditions of individual services may be agreed, restricted, adjusted or withheld due to changed commercial, organisational or contractual circumstances.

10. Obligations of Partner Companies

Each partner company undertakes to observe the principles of professional and responsible business cooperation.

This includes, in particular:

- honesty and integrity in commercial dealings,
- reliable and transparent communication,
- compliance with agreements entered into,
- respectful treatment of business partners, employees and customers,
- proper fulfilment of financial obligations,
- compliance with applicable laws and official regulations,
- protection of confidential information,
- refraining from misleading or unlawful statements about Chumpol Trading Group or other partner companies, and
- refraining from actions likely to seriously undermine confidence in the business relationship.

Partner companies are required to appropriately notify material changes to their corporate structure, legal form or circumstances that may materially affect the existing business relationship, where such notification is necessary for the cooperation.

11. Compliance and Ethical Business Conduct

The Partner Network expects compliance with all laws applicable to the respective business activities and recognised principles of proper business conduct.

11.1 Legal Compliance

Partner companies are responsible for complying with the legal and regulatory requirements applicable to their business activities.

11.2 Anti-Corruption

Improper payments, bribery, unauthorised granting of benefits or other improper influence on business decisions are incompatible with the principles of the Partner Network.

12. The Partner Council

The Partner Council supports the further development of the Partner Network and provides a structured mechanism for partner participation.

The Council consists of 25 partner companies. Its specific composition depends on the development and size of the Partner Network.

The role in the Partner Council is honorary. Membership of the Council does not create any entitlement to special commercial benefits.

12.1 Duties of the Partner Council

The duties of the Partner Council may include, in particular:

- supporting the further development of the Partner Network,
- issuing recommendations on fundamental matters,
- participating in the development of common quality and conduct standards,
- providing advice on fundamental issues,
- promoting fair and trust-based cooperation,
- deciding on admission procedures, and
- making recommendations to management.

The Partner Council has no statutory or corporate authority to represent Chumpol Trading Group and is not authorised to issue legally binding declarations on behalf of the company.

13. Election and Term of Office of the Partner Council

Members of the Partner Council are elected by active partner companies.

Each partner company entitled to vote has one vote. Elections are conducted according to a transparent and appropriate procedure. In view of the international structure of the Network, the specific process may also be conducted electronically.

The term of office is four years. Re-election is permitted.

Decisions within the Partner Council are generally made by a simple majority of valid votes cast unless a different rule has been established for a particular matter.

Management may inform the Council about material decisions and take its recommendations into account. Ultimate responsibility for the commercial and entrepreneurial decisions of Chumpol Trading Group remains with its responsible management.

14. Admission Recommendations by the Partner Council

In suitable cases, the Partner Council may participate in the assessment of applications.

It may, in particular, make recommendations regarding a company's suitability and potential admission.

The recommendation of the Partner Council is advisory. Final admission decisions are made by management.

If management departs from a recommendation of the Partner Council, it may explain the reasons to the Council unless prevented by legal, contractual or legitimate confidentiality interests.

15. Confidentiality

Information provided in connection with an application or an existing partnership shall generally be treated as confidential where its confidential nature is apparent or has been expressly agreed.

Trade and business secrets may be used exclusively for the intended purpose of the cooperation and may not be disclosed to third parties without authorisation.

Specific confidentiality agreements, particularly Non-Disclosure Agreements (NDAs), take precedence within their respective scope.

16. Protection of Projects and Business Opportunities

Where projects, leads, customer contacts or business opportunities are expressly registered or protected within the cooperation, protection is provided in accordance with the agreed conditions.

Membership in the Partner Network alone does not create general protection for mere business ideas or non-binding information.

17. Data Protection

Personal data is processed within the framework of the business relationship and in accordance with the applicable data-protection laws.

Where applicable, processing takes into account in particular the European Union General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and Thailand's Personal Data Protection Act (PDPA).

Corporate and contact data is processed and disclosed only to the extent necessary or legally permitted/required for initiating, conducting and administering the business relationship.

18. Termination of the Partnership

18.1 Voluntary Withdrawal

Any partner company may terminate its membership in the Partner Network at any time by written notice.

Existing contracts, outstanding claims, supply obligations, confidentiality agreements and other obligations remain unaffected by termination of membership.

18.2 Termination by Chumpol Trading Group

The partnership may be terminated for good cause. Good cause may include, in particular:

- serious or repeated breaches of contract,
- substantial payment arrears that have not been appropriately remedied,
- serious breaches of confidentiality obligations,
- proven fraudulent or unlawful conduct,
- significant compliance risks, or
- other circumstances making continuation of the cooperation unreasonable.

Before a final decision, the affected partner company should generally be given an opportunity to comment where appropriate and legally permissible.

The Partner Council may be involved in the assessment. The final decision is made by the responsible management.

19. Suspension of Membership

In special cases, active membership may be temporarily suspended where a final clarification of material circumstances is still pending or immediate termination of the partnership is not considered necessary.

During suspension, individual rights or access may be temporarily restricted. The decision to suspend membership is made taking the circumstances of the individual case into account.

20. No Minimum Volumes and No Exclusivity

Membership in the Partner Network generally creates no obligation regarding:

- minimum purchase quantities,
- minimum turnover,
- exclusive sourcing commitments,
- franchise or licence payments, or
- an obligation to cooperate with other partner companies.

Any different obligations may be established only by separate and individually agreed contracts.

21. Amendments to the Business Regulations

Chumpol Trading Group is entitled to further develop these Admission and Business Regulations and adapt them to changing legal, commercial or organisational conditions.

Material changes will be communicated to the affected partner companies in a timely and appropriate manner.

Where amendments affect existing individual contracts, the contractual provisions applicable to those contracts take precedence.

22. Relationship to Other Agreements

These Admission and Business Regulations establish the general principles of the Partner Network. They do not replace individual contracts between Chumpol Trading Group and a partner company.

The specific business relationship is governed in particular by the applicable contracts, orders, delivery terms, payment arrangements, confidentiality agreements and general terms and conditions.

23. Final Provisions

These Admission and Business Regulations enter into force upon publication and apply to the organisation and cooperation within the Partner Network.

If any provision of these Business Regulations is or becomes wholly or partly invalid or unenforceable, the validity of the remaining provisions remains unaffected.

The applicable statutory provisions shall replace any invalid or unenforceable provision or, to the extent legally permissible, a provision that comes as close as possible to the commercial and organisational purpose of the original provision.

These Business Regulations describe the organisational principles of the Partner Network. They are not to be construed as a corporate agreement, franchise agreement, licence agreement or as establishing a legally independent organisation between the participating partner companies.

Contact and Expression of Interest

Companies interested in long-term cooperation within the Partner Network may submit their written expression of interest to Chumpol Trading Group Company Limited.
